I am passionate about creating clean, scalable, and high-performance web applications that deliver an excellent user experience.

My experience includes converting Figma and UI/UX designs into pixel-perfect, responsive interfaces, developing reusable components, integrating RESTful APIs, and collaborating with designers and backend developers throughout the development lifecycle. I focus on writing clean, maintainable code while ensuring cross-browser compatibility, accessibility, and responsive design across all devices.

I have hands-on experience with SEO optimization, implementing semantic HTML, metadata, canonical URLs, Open Graph tags, structured heading hierarchy, image optimization, and Core Web Vitals improvements to increase website performance and search engine visibility. I have also integrated Google Analytics to monitor user behavior, track website performance, and support data-driven improvements.

My technical skills include component-based architecture, Git version control, REST API integration, state management, performance optimization, and modern frontend development practices. I am comfortable working in collaborative Agile environments, participating in code reviews, and continuously learning new technologies to improve development efficiency.
